READING THE RATES

The peso held at 61.633 and local 10-yr yields eased 5 bps — resilient given the oil shock. U.S. yields rose (10-yr to 4.55%) as the crude spike revived inflation concerns, a headwind for global risk assets and rate-sensitive PH sectors.

5 International

Geopolitics drove the tape. A renewed flare-up between the U.S. and Iran sent oil sharply higher and pressured equities and bonds worldwide.

U.S.–Iran conflict re-escalates. The U.S. military struck Iran for a second straight day, hitting more than 80 sites, and revoked a waiver permitting new sales of Iranian oil. Speaking in Ankara, President Trump said the ceasefire is over "as far as I'm concerned" and dismissed further negotiations. Crude jumped in response — WTI above $72 and Brent near $76 — reviving inflation worries and lifting the U.S. 10-year yield toward 4.55%.

Wall Street mixed-to-lower. Megacap technology weakness pulled the major U.S. gauges down on Wednesday: the S&P 500 slipped for an eighth loss in eleven sessions, the Dow was little changed, and the Nasdaq underperformed. Higher yields and oil kept risk appetite in check.

China tech rallied. Alibaba surged over 12% in Hong Kong — its biggest jump since early September — on earnings optimism and rotation into recent Chinese-tech laggards. Its Lazada–Meta tie-up and a sharper focus on profitability-led overseas growth support the longer-term earnings outlook.

Philippines in focus. Amazon Web Services announced plans to invest up to $5 billion in the Philippines over 15 years, expanding cloud infrastructure, creating thousands of jobs, and giving Filipino businesses, startups, and government agencies faster, more secure services.

6 Philippine Macro*LABOR MARKET — MAY 2026

Unemployment edged up to 4.8% (from 4.7% in April), or about 2.50M jobless Filipinos. Encouragingly, underemployment improved markedly to 12.2% (from 15.2%), and total employment rose by nearly one million — pointing to better job quality even as the headline rate ticked higher.

MONEY & CREDIT — MAY 2026

Money supply (M3) grew +12.8% y/y (from +12.2% in April), signaling stronger liquidity. Bank net loans rose +12.1% (vs +11.4%) and bank lending +12.5% (vs +12.0%). Credit growth continues to firm, underpinning domestic activity.

7 Corporate & DealsBDO

Launched its 6th ASEAN Peso Sustainability Bonds — minimum ₱5B, 1.5-yr tenor, 6.26% p.a. coupon; offer 9–21 Jul, listing 28 Jul.
