PHILIPPINES STRATEGY

A late rally took the PSEi to a close at its high, but foreign selling and a very concentrated tape temper the signal. The index gained 38.23 points to 5,716.15 after sliding to 5,634.65, and the advance was led by one heavyweight: SM rose 6.64% on a ₱79.4M foreign buy, driving Holding Firms up 3.12%. Foreigners were net sellers for a second day (−₱183.8M), almost entirely ICT (−₱486.4M), whose ₱2.79B turnover was 37% of the session's ₱7.46B. Breadth was even (89 advancers to 83 decliners), and the equal-weighted PSEi-30 rose 0.52% against 0.67% for the cap-weighted index.

What the tape shows

- A V-shaped session. The PSEi fell to 5,634.65 (0.76% below the prior close) before closing at the high, back above the Nov 4 close of 5,694.92 and inside the resistance band formed by the Nov 6 and Nov 5 closes (5,761.95 and 5,778.14).
- One name moved the flow numbers. ICT's ₱486.4M foreign sale was 2.6 times the market's net foreign selling; excluding it, foreigners were net buyers of about ₱302M, led by GCASH (+₱172.3M), MER (+₱124.5M) and SM (+₱79.4M). ICT traded as low as ₱762.00 (5.8% below the prior close) before closing at ₱800.00.
- Results were mixed. BusinessWorld headlines show Globe Q3 profit +3.5% (asset-disposal gains), Jollibee +7.4% to ₱3.26B, Megaworld +1.6% to ₱5.32B, Shang Properties +4.6% and Apex Mining +3.4%, against Manila Water −25.3% on higher costs; DMC's nine-month profit rose 28% (desk).
- GCASH led the financials. Mynt's 3Q26 net profit rose 43% to ₱5.63B and 9M net income reached ₱16.5B (+17.4%), per the desk; GCASH rose 5.86% to ₱7.05 on ₱1.26B, while the rest of Financials was flat (+0.16%).
- Macro (desk): third-quarter GDP of 2.1% was the weakest non-pandemic expansion since 2009 and a fifth straight quarter of slowing growth. Oil's slide on Iran-diplomacy optimism is a relief for the import bill, while the US 10-year at 5.002% and talk of a December Fed hike are headwinds for emerging-market flows.

Risks to watch (desk items, not verified)

- US inflation and the Fed: hotter US inflation, a stronger dollar and December rate-hike talk drove Tuesday's US dip; a repeat would test the PSEi's 5,677.92 support.
- Foreign selling: two straight net-selling days (−₱417.8M) follow three days of buying (+₱2.03B); watch whether ICT's outflow persists.
- Growth: 2.1% GDP growth against 7.8% inflation (desk, Nov 5) leaves the BSP little room ahead of its Dec 17 meeting.

LEARN — PRICE-TO-EARNINGS AND EARNINGS YIELD

The concept. The price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio is a share price divided by earnings per share. A P/E of 18.8x means investors pay ₱18.80 for each ₱1 of annual profit. A trailing P/E uses the last 12 months of earnings; a forward P/E uses analysts' estimates for the next 12 months. The inverse, earnings yield (earnings ÷ price), lets you compare a stock with a bond: a P/E of 18.8x is an earnings yield of 5.3%.

Worked example: GCASH (desk X post)	Figure	Arithmetic
Closing price (DQR)	₱7.05	+5.86% on Nov 10
Forward P/E (post)	18.8x	Cited by the post as about 60% above the bank average
Implied forward earnings per share	₱0.375	₱7.05 ÷ 18.8
Earnings yield	5.3%	1 ÷ 18.8
P/E at the post's ₱8.50 target	22.7x	₱8.50 ÷ ₱0.375 (the target is the post's, not DAMS')
Comparison: PHL 10-year yield	About 8.0%	8.006% last edition; 8.002% as typed today

Why it matters today. A 5.3% earnings yield against a government bond near 8% means investors are paying for growth: GCASH's forward P/E assumes profit keeps rising much faster than the banks' (the post cites about 39% against 11% annual growth). If growth disappoints, the P/E can compress even while the share price's earnings stay intact, which is why a 5.86% one-day gain can reverse quickly. A high P/E is not a verdict; it is a statement of what the market already expects.

How to use it. (1) Compare P/E within the same industry and growth profile, not across unlike businesses. (2) Check whether earnings are recurring or one-off, such as asset-disposal gains. (3) Use forward estimates but note whose they are and how old. (4) Compare the earnings yield with bond yields: when the gap is wide, the stock needs growth to justify its price. Takeaway: P/E tells you what you pay for earnings; the growth, the source of the estimate and the bond yield tell you whether that price is reasonable. Further reading: search Investopedia for "price-to-earnings ratio" and "earnings yield".
