Wall Street rebounded Thursday (Dow +1.08%, S&P 500 +0.33%, Nasdaq +0.08%), with the S&P snapping a three-day skid as chipmaker selloffs eased and Nvidia's Jensen Huang defended AI supplier CoreWeave's financial health (desk item, not verified). Asia's Oct 15 closes were weak: Nikkei −4.90%, TWSE −3.41%, Shanghai −1.59%, Hang Seng −1.30% and JCI −1.33%, while Sensex gained 2.11%. This morning, as pasted, KOSPI is +1.51% and the ASX 200 +0.96%; the derived priors imply Oct 15 closes of 5,554.22 for KOSPI (−7.57% from Oct 14's derived 6,008.81, consistent with Thursday's −7.65% live print) and 8,519.72 for the ASX 200. Most Asian rows now have priors equal to yesterday's pasted levels, which confirms yesterday's basis calls.

Oil is bid; metals are mixed. WTI is $97.37 (−0.61%) and Brent $105.43 (−0.46%), yet their derived priors ($97.97 and $105.92) sit well above yesterday's pasted levels ($94.02 and $104.56), so crude rose sharply between our two reads; verify. Gold is $4,174.40 (+0.10%), silver $57.28 (+0.21%) and COMEX copper 655.35¢/lb (−0.05%). Nickel fell 1.25%, cocoa rose 1.67%, sugar 1.39% and coffee fell 1.09%. On the PSE, Mining & Oil dropped 2.47% (AT −6.74%, APX −3.50%, PX −0.75%, OGP −0.72%, SCC +3.29%), despite the desk's earlier view of a technical rebound.

† Derived priors for WTI, Brent, gold, silver, copper, corn and wheat differ from yesterday's pasted levels (e.g., WTI $97.97 vs $94.02; silver $57.16 vs $56.42); verify. Brent's and copper's changes were pasted as "−0.49%" and "−0.30%" and sugar's as "+0.29%"; arithmetic shows they are absolute moves. Silver's pasted +0.22% compares with +0.21% derived. Cocoa, coffee, sugar and nickel priors match yesterday's prints. ‡ Nickel still conflicts with Kitco's $15,483.65 (Oct 13); not re-checked. § Coal's change was not pasted.

PSE read-through: Mining & Oil was the only sector with a large decline (−475.46 pts on ₱178.9M of value). Philex (PX −0.75%, ₱10.52) reached a labor settlement (headline).

The peso is at a record low. The desk reports it breached ₱63 per dollar for the first time, blaming severe geopolitical events, soaring import costs and a weaker local buffer; the USD-PHP row was left blank, so the table shows N/A (the DQR reference rate is 62.870, the Oct 14 rate). Who it hurts / who it helps (framework, not desk view): importers and dollar-debt payers bear the cost; exporters and remittance-receiving households gain. The PHL 10-year is pasted at 7.938% with no change; the desk text says the yield rose 19.4bp to 8.01% on Wednesday, so treat the level as unverified. The US 10-year eased 0.8bp to 5.082%; USD-JPY is 158.18, USD-CNY 6.6908 and EUR-USD 1.121. The desk also flags August OFW remittances (estimate +2.0% YoY, prior +1.9%; prior level $3,240M; release date not given).

A rebound with better flows, still fragile. The PSEi recovered from 5,564.47 to close at 5,663.17 and foreigners bought on net after three heavy-selling sessions, but turnover was inflated by ₱1.04B of block crosses and the headline net buy rests on ₱184.9M not attributed to any issue (issue-level nets are −₱44.4M). Asia's closes were weak, the peso is at a record low and Mining & Oil fell 2.47%. The desk supplied no market stance today, so we show levels rather than a recommendation.

What the tape shows

- Rotation to property and banks: Property +1.89% (SMPH +5.57%) and Financials +1.28% (PNB, BPI, BDO) led, while Mining & Oil −2.47% and Industrial −0.30% lagged.
- Foreign buying was narrow: TEL (+₱101.4M) supplied 72% of the day's top-four net buys (TEL, AEV, PNB, BPI total + ₱220.6M); ICT and MWC were the main sellers.

Risks to watch (desk items, not verified)

- Peso and yields: a record-low peso and a PHL 10-year near 7.9–8.0% raise import costs and funding costs; banks were nonetheless the sector's second-best performer today.
- Mining: AT −6.74% reversed most of Oct 14's gain (+4.78%) and APX −3.50%; foreigners sold both (−₱17.1M and −₱17.5M).
- Real estate and industrial property (headlines): mall visits are fewer but longer (Megaworld); Savills says port and road projects are reshaping industrial property prospects; Haus Talk is putting ₱499M into projects and land banking.

Mid-caps lagged the headline PSEi (equal-weighted −0.36% vs +0.82%): PNB (+2.82%), KEEPR (+2.69%) and MEG (+1.36%) rose, while APX (−3.50%), SEVN (−2.10%) and CNVRG (−1.92%) fell; MWC drew −₱71.7M of foreign selling on ₱202.8M. Roster per PSE circular CN-2026-0035.

The concept. A block sale is a large trade negotiated between two parties and printed separately from the regular order book. It counts toward the day's total, sector and stock value, so one cross can make turnover look much larger than ordinary trading interest. Compare regular-market value with block value before reading turnover as demand.

Oct 15 session	Reading
Block value / grand-total value	₱1,038.6M / ₱6,991.3M (14.9%)
SMPH regular value / block value	₱241.5M / ₱392.9M (blocks 62% of its combined value)
SMPH blocks: price vs regular range	₱15.81–15.82 vs day low ₱15.90 and close ₱16.68 (−5.2% vs close)
Property sector value / SMPH + RLC blocks	₱915.1M / ₱416.5M (46%)
WEB regular value / block value	₱23.7M / ₱208.5M
Net foreign: headline / issue-level sum	+₱140.5M / −₱44.4M

Why it matters today. Property's ₱915.1M of value and the ₱6.99B headline are inflated by crosses: nearly half of Property's value is two block prints, and SMPH's ₱241.5M of regular trading is the better gauge of day-to-day interest. The blocks cleared below the day's low, which says they were privately negotiated rather than priced off the live book. The DQR does not name buyers or sellers, so a block cannot be linked to foreign flows: SMPH's −₱30.0M of foreign selling is far smaller than its ₱392.9M of blocks.
How to use it. (1) Strip blocks out to see regular value. (2) Compare the block price with the day's range and close. (3) Check whether the sector or stock move happened in the regular market. Takeaway: judge interest by regular-market value, and treat block value as a separate, one-off transfer.
