A narrow gain with foreigners back. The PSEi rose 0.26% on a fifth straight advance, but nine of 30 constituents rose and the equal-weighted average fell 0.38%, so a few large names carried the index. Foreigners were net buyers of ₱503.3M against Tuesday's −₱11.39B, with TEL, ICT, SMPH, GCASH and ALI taking most of it; they were net sellers of LTG, MBT, CNPF and FB. Regular main-board value was ₱6.30B (₱7.05B including blocks), far below Tuesday's ₱58.90B and about 20% above Oct 19's ₱5.87B. The test now is whether the buying continues on a day with a BSP decision and a weak peso.

What the tape shows

Risks to watch (desk and BusinessWorld items, not verified)

- Peso and the BSP: a record-low peso, a September balance-of-payments shortfall of $3.144B (desk) and today's policy meeting keep rate and currency risk in focus; foreign flows this week swung from −₱11.39B to +₱503.3M.
- Credit and construction: Moody's flags rising risks in Philippine MSME retail loans, and approved building permits fell to an over six-year low in August (BusinessWorld headlines; articles not opened).
- Policy and weather: the administration will ask the Supreme Court to review its 2024–2026 budget ruling; PAGASA says El Niño effects could persist through the first half of 2027; GSIS allots ₱1.69B for the water crisis (headlines only).

The concept. USD-PHP is the number of pesos one dollar buys, so a higher number means a weaker peso. A foreign investor's return is the stock's return in pesos plus the currency move: if the peso weakens while a share is flat, the investor's dollar value falls. A weaker peso also makes imports such as oil more expensive, which can feed inflation and push a central bank toward higher rates. Equity flows and the currency often move together because foreign selling means converting pesos into dollars.

Peso and flows, from the DQR and desk notes	Value
DQR conversion rate, Oct 19 report	₱62.985 per US$1
DQR conversion rate, Oct 20 and Oct 21 reports	₱63.090 per US$1
Peso move on the DQR rates (62.985 → 63.090)	−0.17% (a dollar holder's value falls 0.17%)
Desk quote, Oct 22 (time and source not stated)	63.07; desk support 62.35 (50-DMA)
Net foreign, Oct 20 (−₱11,392.5M) at ₱63.09	about −US$180.6M (arithmetic)
Net foreign, Oct 21 (+₱503.3M) at ₱63.09	about +US$7.98M (desk X post: US$7.97M)
BSP key rate (desk) / PHL 10-yr	5.0% / 8.055%

Why it matters today. BusinessWorld says the peso sank to a 34th record low of 2026, the desk says the dollar broke resistance, and the BSP meets today; the PHL 10-year yield is 8.055%. Yet foreigners returned as net buyers of ₱503.3M, so equity flows and the currency did not move together on Wednesday. For a foreign buyer, the stock has to rise by more than the peso's slide just to break even in dollars, and a rate decision that surprises the market could move both the currency and bank shares.
How to use it. (1) Convert flows to dollars at the DQR rate to see what foreign accounts actually bought or sold. (2) Watch whether USD-PHP holds above the desk's support while foreigners keep buying. (3) Read the BSP decision for its effect on the peso, the 10-year yield and banks. Takeaway: a weaker peso is a headwind for dollar-based investors, so continued foreign buying through it is a stronger signal than buying on a stable peso.
