GLOBAL MARKETS OVERVIEW — June 2, 2026 (June 1 Session Review)

Note: * June 1 PSEi DQR actual close = 5,799.32 (+0.53%, +30.56 pts) — first positive session in over a week. The brief shows PSEi as 5,768.76 in both columns; DQR authoritative close overrides. Oil surged: WTI +2.82%, Brent +2.27% on Iran conflict uncertainty. PHL 10-year yield reversed to 7.517% (+8.6 bps) as oil rise re-elevated inflation concerns. T-bill auction: 91d at 5.143%, 182d at 5.624%, 364d at 6.269%.

The June 1 DQR records net foreign selling of PHP 1,132,553,670 — approximately USD 18.349M — a dramatic deceleration from Friday's MSCI-driven USD 107.846M. This is the clearest confirmation that Friday's extraordinary outflow was predominantly mechanical index rebalancing, not discretionary bear selling. Genuine conviction selling on June 1 totalled USD 18.349M — still elevated versus the daily average but entirely within normal market range. Foreign buying was notable in SGP (PHP 41.7M), CNVRG (PHP 45.75M foreign bought per DQR), GLO (PHP 33.7M), and RRHI. Selling continued in telcos (TEL PHP 32M, ICT PHP 222M), property (ALI PHP 132M, SMPH PHP 113M), and consumer food (JFC PHP 22M). JFC block sales of PHP 597M in three tranches represent continued post-MSCI portfolio unwinds from index funds completing repositioning.

GLOBAL MARKETS COMMENTARY

US equities posted modest gains — Dow +0.09%, S&P 500 +0.26%, Nasdaq +0.42% — as technology continued to lead despite a reversal in oil that created cross-asset turbulence. The major development overnight: oil surged sharply — WTI +2.82% to USD 91.94 and Brent +2.27% to USD 95.01 — as mixed signals on the Iran deal (US and Iran trading messages on a draft agreement without confirmed progress) combined with WTI's 'biggest gain in about a month' on strong demand data. This oil reversal is a headwind for the Philippines' rate trajectory and contradicts the previous session's bond yield compression thesis.

The PHL 10-year yield reversed higher to 7.517% from 7.431% — an 8.6 basis point reversal in a single day, erasing a significant portion of the previous week's bond rally. The correlation is direct: oil rose, inflation expectations re-elevated, bond markets sold off, and the peso weakened to 61.738 (from 61.604). This pattern is a reminder that the Iran deal narrative must be resolved — not just discussed — before the Philippine bond and equity markets can sustainably re-rate. The T-bill auction results (91d at 5.143%, 182d at 5.624%, 364d at 6.269%) provide a benchmark for the short-end of the curve and confirm that short-term financing costs remain elevated.

Asia was mixed. Korea's KOSPI surged 1.28% to 8,624; Taiwan's TWSE added 1.35% to 45,337; Japan's Nikkei gained 0.41%. Hong Kong's Hang Seng recovered 0.86%. But India's SENSEX fell 0.68%, Vietnam declined 1.02%, and Australia's ASX lost 0.51% — a bifurcated Asia that reflects both the Iran deal optimism (benefiting Northeast Asia chip plays) and oil anxiety (hurting energy-importing markets). The Philippines, as a pure oil importer with 90% dependence on Middle Eastern supply and only 47 days of gasoline reserves, sits squarely in the vulnerability camp.

PHILIPPINES MACRO WATCH

The PSEi's June 1 close of 5,799.32 (+0.53%, +30.56 pts) marks the first positive session in eight trading days and the first advance-led session (102 vs. 93 declines) since the market began its post-Iran-conflict selloff. This is the post-MSCI price normalization the previous edition flagged as the likely outcome: with forced index selling complete, the market found its natural buyers. The session range of 5,799–5,874 shows a fragile recovery — the PSEi closed at the low of the session's upper half, suggesting caution. Value turnover of PHP 8.50 billion, while still elevated by historical standards, is sharply lower than Friday's extraordinary PHP 26.47 billion.

The Philippines' strategic oil reserve announcement is a long-term structural positive worth contextualising: the country currently maintains only 47 days of gasoline supply, 44 days of diesel, and 65 days of jet fuel — all sourced predominantly from the Middle East. Building a strategic reserve is the appropriate policy response to this vulnerability, but implementation takes 2–3 years and billions in capital commitment. In the near term, the Strait of Hormuz risk premium in oil prices (WTI back to USD 91.94) continues to bear directly on: (1) the BSP's inflation trajectory (May CPI expected 7.1%–7.9%); (2) electricity tariff calculations for the June WESM period; and (3) the peso's equilibrium level against the USD.

BSP's June meeting (June 4–5) is the pivotal event of the week. The May CPI print will arrive before the meeting, directly informing the rate decision. A lower-end print (7.1%–7.3%) opens the door to a smaller 25 bps hike; an upper-end print (7.7%–7.9%) makes 50 bps near-certain. Oil's bounce back to USD 91.94 on June 1 is an adverse development for the lower-end scenario. The bond market's yield reversal (7.431% → 7.517%) suggests the market is now re-pricing toward a 50 bps hike probability. Watch the May CPI release — expected Tuesday June 2 — as the most important single data point this week.

CORPORATE UPDATES

[MARKET / JFC / AGI] MSCI Rebalancing Complete: Post-Deletion Price Recovery Underway; Blue-Chip Re-Entry Window Open

The MSCI semi-annual rebalancing is now fully complete, with all forced index-related selling executed as of May 29's effective date. The June 1 session confirmed the normalization thesis: JFC, which hit a 52-week low of PHP 126.90 on May 29, rebounded to PHP 130.60 (+2.92%) — with PHP 597 million in additional block sales clearing through the market in three tranches at prices consistent with the previous session's low. This suggests the block selling at PHP 126.90 represents motivated index sellers who have now exited, leaving the stock available to longer-term value buyers. AGI — the other major MSCI deletion — closed at PHP 8.23 on June 1 from its 52-week low. Non-deleted stocks with heavy MSCI-related selling also began recovery: ALI, now near 15-year lows at PHP 14.52, remains one of the most striking dislocation opportunities in the entire PSEi universe. SMPH recovered modestly to PHP 18.42 (+0.11%) after buyback support. SM rebounded 2.44% to PHP 588. MER gained 0.79%.

Analysis: The post-MSCI price normalization is playing out exactly as expected — but it is a process, not an event. Additional block clearing (JFC PHP 597M on June 1) confirms that some index-mandate sellers are still completing repositioning. The window for re-entry in JFC, ALI, SMPH, and SM is still open — these prices represent genuine dislocations from fair value caused by index mechanics, not fundamental deterioration. JFC's franchise (global fast-food operations, sustained earnings growth) has not changed; its exclusion from MSCI is a technicality of float-adjusted market cap methodology. The June BSP rate decision and May CPI print are the next fundamental catalysts that will determine the trajectory of this recovery.

● Stance: ACCUMULATE | JFC — Post-MSCI re-entry below PHP 132; franchise intact; 52-wk low PHP 126.90 | ACCUMULATE | ALI — PHP 14.52 near 15-yr low; MSCI mechanical; long-term entry | ACCUMULATE | SM — Buyback + community hub + post-MSCI recovery

[DD] DoubleDragon FY2025 Revenue Hits Record PHP 27.91B — Up 56.3% — on New Overseas Operations

DoubleDragon Corp. (DD) reported FY2025 revenue of PHP 27.91 billion — a 56.3% increase of PHP 10.05 billion over FY2024's PHP 17.86 billion — driven primarily by revenues from new overseas operations launched in 2025. The company did not provide a breakdown of domestic versus international revenue contribution, but management noted that the growth reflects DoubleDragon's expansion beyond its traditional Philippine commercial real estate portfolio into overseas markets. DD — founded by Edgar 'Injap' Sia II and Tony Tan Caktiong — operates hotel brands including Hotel 101, Jinjiang Hotels (via partnership), and Jollibee-anchored commercial real estate. The overseas expansion strategy appears to have generated significant revenue traction in its first full year of operations.

Analysis: DD's 56.3% revenue surge is a remarkable top-line outcome and confirms that the company's overseas pivot is generating material scale rapidly. However, until DD provides a breakdown of the profitability metrics (net income, EBITDA margin, overseas vs. domestic) and confirms that overseas revenue is translating to sustainable earnings rather than one-time recognition, the full quality of the growth story remains unverified. DD at PHP 10.20 (June 1 DQR close) is trading at a premium to its post-MSCI distressed peers. Monitor for the full financial statement release and breakdown of overseas vs. domestic earnings contribution.

● Stance: MONITOR | DD — FY2025 revenue +56.3%; overseas ops driving growth; await profitability and earnings breakdown before upgrading to ACCUMULATE

[DHI] Dominion Holdings Postpones Annual Stockholders' Meeting from June 15 to August 12, 2026

The Board of Directors of Dominion Holdings, Inc. (DHI) approved the postponement of the Annual Stockholders' Meeting (ASM) from June 15, 2026 to August 12, 2026, to be held via remote communication. The record date for the postponed ASM is set for July 31, 2026. DHI did not provide specific reasons for the postponement in its public filing. DHI at PHP 7.40 (June 1 DQR close) has declined significantly from its recent session highs; it was foreign-bought on June 1 (PHP 11,120) despite the postponement news.

Analysis: ASM postponements without explanation create temporary governance uncertainty — investors cannot review management accountability, vote on board composition, or receive formal annual reports at the original scheduled date. DHI's postponement to August 12 via remote communication is not unusual in the post-pandemic disclosure environment, but the two-month delay bears monitoring. DHI at PHP 7.40 is well below its DQR session high of PHP 8.30 earlier in the week. The RSI oversold signal for DMC (a related group name) noted in the 52-week context is relevant. Monitor for DHI's explanation and financial disclosures.

● Stance: MONITOR | DHI — ASM postponed to August 12; no reason stated; await formal financial disclosures; governance watch

[MACRO / ENERGY] Philippines Plans Strategic Oil Reserve as Middle East Supply Risk Bites; 47 Days Gasoline Supply

The Philippine government announced plans to build a Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) to protect the economy from global supply disruptions and price volatility — a policy response to the country's acute vulnerability to Middle East oil supply risks. The Philippines currently imports approximately 90% of its oil from the Middle East and maintains only 47 days of gasoline supply, 44 days of diesel, and 65 days of jet fuel reserve. The SPR plan — which will involve building storage infrastructure capable of holding emergency petroleum supplies — would take years to implement and requires significant capital investment. The Strait of Hormuz, through which approximately one-fifth of global oil supply transits daily, remains at heightened geopolitical risk as US-Iran ceasefire talks continue without a formal agreement. Energy Secretary Sharon Garin has emphasized that 'energy security is a national security issue.'

FIRST NEWS

Employing Intelligent Investing
Tuesday, June 2, 2026

Analysis: The SPR announcement is sound long-term energy policy — the Philippines' 47-day gasoline reserve is among the shortest in Asia and creates acute near-term vulnerability to any supply shock. However, building an SPR is a multi-year, multi-billion-peso commitment that provides no relief to the current situation. In the near term, the oil price dynamics (WTI back to USD 91.94) and WESM pricing for June will be the more immediate energy cost signals for listed companies. For investors, the SPR narrative reinforces the long-term investment case for domestic energy producers (FGEN, ACEN, SCC) and grid infrastructure (SGP) that reduce dependence on imported fuel.

● Stance: ACCUMULATE | FGEN, ACEN, SCC, SGP — SPR narrative reinforces domestic energy security investment case; grid infrastructure and RE are the structural beneficiaries

AREIT — TECHNICAL ANALYSIS

AREIT Inc. (PSE: AREIT) | June 1 DQR Close: PHP 38.25 | RECOVERY FROM 52-WEEK LOW | ACCUMULATE CONFIRMED
MONTHLY CHART — Fibonacci Retracement Levels

Post-52-Week Low Recovery:
AREIT closed at PHP 38.25 on June 1 (DQR) — up PHP 0.40 (+1.06%) from the 52-week low of PHP 37.85 set on May 29. Foreign buying on June 1: PHP 2.19M — continuation of the accumulation pattern observed over the past three sessions (PHP 5.68M on May 28, PHP 32.13M on May 29, PHP 2.19M on June 1). The recovery from the 52-week low, combined with three consecutive sessions of foreign buying into weakness, confirms the capitulation-and-accumulation setup. The Fibonacci base at PHP 40.55 remains the first recovery target. Note: the PHL 10-year yield reversed to 7.517% on June 1 (from 7.431%), which is a mild headwind for REIT valuation — this is why AREIT recovery will be gradual rather than sharp.

WEEKLY CHART — RSI & MACD

RSI Recovery from Oversold:
Weekly RSI which was approaching confirmed sub-30 oversold at the PHP 37.85 low is now recovering. The MACD histogram compressing pattern is intact. Three consecutive sessions of foreign buying at or near the 52-week low with the stock beginning to bounce confirms the bottom-building process. The key watchpoint: if the bond yield (PHL 10-year) stabilises below 7.5%, AREIT's recovery toward the PHP 40.55 Fibonacci base becomes more sustained. Entry in tranches at current prices (PHP 38.00–38.50) remains the recommended approach. Stop-loss below PHP 37.00 (below the confirmed 52-week low). Target: PHP 40.55 first, then PHP 41.75 (0.236 Fibonacci).

● Stance: ACCUMULATE | AREIT — PHP 38.25 DQR; recovering from 52-wk low PHP 37.85; 3 consecutive sessions of foreign buying; RSI recovery from oversold; entry PHP 38.00–38.50; target PHP 40.55; stop PHP 37.00
