PHILIPPINES STRATEGY

The PSEi gave back part of Tuesday's rebound while the average stock edged up; foreign flow turned positive but remained concentrated in GCASH. The index lost 22.95 points to 5,693.20 on thinner turnover (₱6.08B, down 18.5%), with ICT (−2.50%, closing at its low) and SM (−1.38%) outweighing JFC's 5.08% rally; the equal-weighted PSEi-30 rose 0.12%. Net foreign flow was +₱55.4M, but GCASH's +₱170.3M and an ICT sale of ₱182.8M account for most of the movement; excluding ICT, foreigners were net buyers of about ₱238M.

What the tape shows

- The index is boxed in. The PSEi closed between Tuesday's close (5,716.15, resistance) and the Nov 9 close (5,677.92, support), after a 5,685.30–5,732.15 range; a desk X post describes the pattern as a bearish continuation and consolidation. Asia rose for a third straight session, so the PSEi lagged.
- Turnover is again one name and blocks. ICT's ₱1.84B was 30% of value and its five blocks (₱519.5M) were 87% of the ₱596.2M block value; the top 10 issues were 74.5% of the ₱6.08B.
- Results season continues. Desk X posts show 9M net income up 20% at ICT (US$898.89M), 9% at SM (₱70B), 12% at CBC (₱22.6B) and 17.4% at GCASH (₱16.5B); BusinessWorld headlines show ACEN swinging to a ₱609M Q3 loss on wind and solar asset charges, Empire East Q3 profit down 41% and MacroAsia Q3 income down 67.7%. Prices did not follow earnings: ICT, SM, CBC and ACEN all fell.
- GCASH keeps drawing flow. Foreigners bought ₱170.3M after ₱172.3M on Nov 10 (₱342.6M over two days) as the stock rose 2.27% to ₱7.21 on ₱1.11B.
- Macro (desk): Q3 GDP of 2.1% has the economy described as in "stagflation" or "slowflation"; Citigroup cut its 2026 growth forecast to 4.3% from 5.8%, and a BusinessWorld headline says BMI cut its Philippine forecasts. A bill filed by Sen. Bam Aquino would cut the VAT to 10% from 12%. The peso weakened about 0.5% on hot US inflation and Fed-hike calls.

Risks to watch (desk items, not verified)

- US inflation and the Fed: hotter US inflation has bolstered calls for a Fed rate hike (BusinessWorld headline); a firmer dollar keeps pressure on the peso and on foreign appetite for the PSE.
- Growth downgrades: the 2.1% GDP print, Citi's cut to 4.3% and BMI's cut leave little cushion against 7.8% inflation (desk, Nov 5) ahead of the BSP's Dec 17 meeting.
- ICT concentration: two straight falls and ₱669.2M of foreign selling in two days make ICT the main swing factor for both the index and flows.
- Semirara supply: the Acacia Mine suspension (seawater inflows) is a production risk for SCC, with the financial impact unclear.

LEARN — REPORTED VS RECURRING EARNINGS

The concept. Reported (or net) income is the profit after every item in the accounts, including one-offs such as asset impairments, disposal gains and currency swings. Recurring income strips out items a company treats as unusual, to show what the core business earns. The gap between them tells you how much of a result came from events that may not repeat. An impairment (an "asset charge") is a non-cash write-down when an asset is judged to be worth less than its book value: it cuts reported profit without any cash leaving the company that quarter.

Worked example: ICT, 9M26 (desk X post)	Figure	Arithmetic
Reported net income	US$898.89M	+20% YoY
Recurring net income	US$913.59M	+22% YoY
Gap: recurring less reported	US$14.70M	913.59 − 898.89
Gap as a share of reported income	1.6%	14.70 ÷ 898.89
EBITDA margin (cash-style earnings)	64.5%	EBITDA 1.87 ÷ revenue 2.90 (US$B)
Contrast: ACEN Q3 (BusinessWorld headline)	Net loss ₱609M	Asset charges on wind and solar; amount of the charges not stated

Why it matters today. ICT's two measures are close, so its 20% profit growth is mostly core operations, yet the stock fell 2.50% amid ₱519.5M of block trades and foreign selling: a good earnings number does not guarantee a price gain when large holders are selling. ACEN is the reverse case: a reported loss caused by asset charges can say more about past investment decisions than about this quarter's operating performance, but it still lowers book value and can signal that earlier project assumptions were too optimistic. Neither number is the "true" one; the two together show the quality of the result.

How to use it. (1) Read the notes to the results for the items excluded from recurring income. (2) Compare the growth rates of reported and recurring income. (3) Ask whether the "one-off" appears year after year. (4) Check operating cash flow or EBITDA to see whether cash earnings agree. Takeaway: recurring income tells you what the business does, reported income tells you what shareholders got, and a persistent gap between the two is itself information. Further reading: search Investopedia for “impairment” and “recurring earnings”.
